

princesschronicles

March 2009

Here's the thing... as part of your everyday plans please always try to incorporate your inner creativity. There is an artist in all of us. Don't ever forget that we all possess a certain amount of flare whether it be in the written word, in photo taking, in singing or in drawing. Write down your thoughts once in a while or draw in a little sketch book. You never know where your inner talent will lead you.

Princess Tess

Happy St. Patrick's Day!

St. Patrick's Day is celebrated on March 17, his religious feast day and the anniversary of his death in the fifth century. The Irish have observed this day as a religious holiday for over a thousand years. On St. Patrick's Day, which falls during the Christian season of Lent, Irish families would traditionally attend church in the morning and celebrate in the afternoon. Lenten prohibitions against the consumption of meat were waived and people would dance, drink, and feast—on the traditional meal of Irish bacon and cabbage.

Courtesy of history.com

Home Spun Spaahhh!

Money's tight so let's talk about what you can do to yourself you're a million bucks spending without that much. How hair colour. Be confident colour and try to from a box or go the natural route with henna. A block of henna can last a few colourings and is easy to do. If your true self only wants to go to a spa for the sake of being away from home you'd better suck it up...re-arrange your bathroom a little and pretend you're spending the afternoon at a new spa called "CHEZ VOUS".

And in the end, it's not the years in your life that count. It's the life in your years.

Abraham Lincoln

Where is the year going already? How did we get through two months? How are we supposed to keep living each day to the fullest when each day flies by so fast!? Time to sit down and take a break. Right now. Stop what you're doing...no, wait...that would mean you'll stop reading this issue. After you finish reading this just take a break! No need to waste your break time with recapping what you've done the last two months just use your break to relax your mind and your body. Feel better yet?

So how about that breakup on the Bachelor? The Headquarters never saw the actual rose giving but seeing how much hype came after that episode we clearly couldn't help but get sucked in. Talk about the breakup heard around the world. Not a lot can get this Princess commenting on a reality show but all that should be said is this...SPEAK UP SISTER! Why did that girl not give the Bachelor the what for?! That fella should have gotten the earful of a LIFETIME! 'Nough said.

Birthdays...love 'em or hate 'em, they show up once a year.

What's your preference? Celebrate or let it ride? Is the celebration low key or do you go all out and get silly enough that you don't remember it the next day? No matter what you would do this is actually about what we should do for others. When you can, figure out when the birthdays are of your closest friends and find out if they actually want their birthday to be celebrated.

exclusive celebration can be big hoopla. Now if you someone who wants the 300 isn't really a surprise at all Board of Directors and start this either needs a party together or you and selfless and throw the Now...having said plunge and move forward and you find yourself friend for wanting this party, tracks. Oddly enough, it's someone else's big day by meant to be a celebration, about your friend and their The best token you can give your warm thoughts of congratulations.

To some people a quiet, more fulfilling than a great happen to be friends with person surprise party that then you need to form a delegating. An event like contracted person to put the your friends need to be shindig together yourselves. this...should you take the with planning it on your own beginning to resent your you need to stop in your NOT about you. If that is the then you deal. Don't ruin being resentful. Parties are not a forum for complaining crazy birthday wishes. to a birthday recipient is

Or in the case of many a Princess...the compliment of rewinding their actual years to somewhere in their early twenties. The near problem with birthdays these days is that there is so much that we can do that is too easy. Send an e-card. Send an e-mail. Make a phone call. POST A BIRTHDAY NOTE CARD (as per Princess etiquette). The only obstacle in our way is simply remembering the big day. Please...we beg you...don't shame yourself by telling someone that you forgot. It's not that tough. In fact, it's really that easy. Just be pro-active and do what suits you best. You'd be amazed at how you can make someone feel so truly special if you make sure they are remembered.

Now if you're up for it, try something really original...research the person's birthstone and put together a write up about it for them. Find their horoscope for the day and make sure you enclose it with the card you give them. Maybe scribble down some history about their hometown and add some pictures of the person when they were little. No matter what the age, and no matter how much fuss we all want at our birthday, everyone appreciates the effort put forth in remembering.

If you do go ahead and have the big party by all means ensure that the Birthday Person has a crown of some sort. Let's be real...if they want the massive party, they sure as hell aren't a SHY person are they?

Please pass this edition of  princesschronicles on to anyone you think would be interested.

If you know anyone who would like to be added to our distribution list please send a quick email to: perks@princessheadquarters.com

Most illustrations and logos provided by Jennifer Herbert – www.jenniferherbert.com
Princess Chronicles and princessheadquarters.com © 2002 - 2009 princessheadquarters.com Communications, Inc.

Join our Facebook group Princess Headquarters.

Visit us at:

 princess
headquarters.com